PREFACE

The Andrews families in New England and New York and their descendants in the West, most of them, at least, trace their lineage either to early immigrants who, in 1640, settled at Farmington, Connecticut, or to others who came to New London, in the same State. The genealogy of the former line was diligently searched out and brought down to 1870, by Alfred Andrews of Connecticut, and published in an octavo volume of several hundred pages by his son, A. H. Andrews of Chicago. Hon. Charles Andrews, late chief judge of the New York State Court of Appeals, and his brother a Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church, belonged to this line.

The name is said to be derived from andres, the plural of the Greek word for "man." It has been variously spelled, sometimes to correspond to local pronunciation; thus—Andrews, Andrew, Andrewes, Andrus, Andros and Anders. Etymologically related are the names Andre and Anderson.

The name Clark, at first spelled "Clerk," which in England is still commonly pronounced "Clark," was primarily descriptive of occupation. Originally employed to designate persons who could read and write. it. at length—like Smith, a worker in metals—came to be used as a surname. Thus “John, the smith.” and “James, the clerk,” became simply “John Smith” and “James Clerk, or Clark.” Clergy is derived from clerk; and it is noticeable that among the earliest encouragements to learning in England was the Benefit to Clergy Act—which exempted the Clerks, or Clarks, from hanging, in case of crimes for which uneducated people were condemned to capital punishment.

Tell ye your children of it,
and let your children tell their children and their children another generation.

Joel 1:2.

GENEALOGICAL RECORD

THE ANDREWS LINE

First Generation

John and Mary Andrews, immigrants from Essex County, England, settled in Farmington, Conn., in 1640. John was made "free," that is, a voter, by joining the church, May 20th, 1658. He became a large landowner. They had three daughters and six sons, the oldest child, Mary, being born in 1643. John died in 1681 and his wife in 1694

Second

Joseph Andrews, their sixth child, born May 26, 1651; married in 1677 Rebekah — family name lost—and moved to Wethersfield, Conn., becoming an extensive land holder, and owner of a mill. He died in 1706. They had five sons and two daughters.

Third

Joseph Andrews, Jr., M. D., their oldest child, born in 1678; married, Nov. 18, 1706, Sarah Curtiss, of Southold, L. I.; practiced medicine in Newington Parish, Wethersfield. He died in 1756, and his wife in 1760. They had five sons.

Fourth

Joshua Andrews, their oldest; born Dec. 11, 1707, and married, May, 1731, Sybil Stoddard, two years his senior. He was active in church and education, being known as "Deacon Andrews." and became quite wealthy for those days. They had three sons who grew to manhood. Besides these there were eight children born within the period of two years and five months; triplets. born Jan. 8, 1742, died on day of birth; triplets. born March 3, 1743, died the same day; twins. born June 1, 1744, one dying at birth and the other at the age of twelve. Deacon Andrews and his wife lived together 54 years. she dying in 1785, and he in 1786.

Fifth

Jeremiah Andrews, their oldest; born Jan. 16, 1732; married Sarah Bryant, a grand aunt of William Cullen Bryant, and moved to Canaan, Conn.. where in 1777 by joining the church he became a "freeman," or voter. He was active in church and school affairs, and, before his death in his 50th year, had accumulated a handsome property. His wife, who long survived him, was blind for 40 years. They had five sons and four daughters.

Sixth

Theodore Andrews, their second child and oldest son, was born in Canaan, Conn., June, 1765. At the age of 22 he married Orinda Bosworth of the same town, two years his junior. They lived first, at West Addington, Vt., where his brother-in-law, Silas Belden, had settled; and here their first children were born. He is described as a “tall, spare man,” and his wife as a “short, well-formed, graceful woman.” He inherited considerable land, was a farmer by occupation, but of unsettled disposition, and given to trading—usually having the “poor end of the bargain.” They moved several times, alternating between Canaan, Conn., and West Stockbridge, Mass., and by middle life he had lost all his property. His wife is recorded as “an excellent woman, thrifty and bright.” On one occasion, when the husband brought home a watch obtained in some trade, and gleefully asked where he should hang it, she quietly replied,—“There is plenty of room in the pork barrel.” Their last years were spent with their son, Richard, in Hector, N. Y. After a married life of 63 years he died in 1850, she living to the age of 92. They are buried in Logan cemetery.

Seventh

Children of Theodore and Orinda Bosworth Andrews

- (1) Twin Boys, that died in infancy.
- (2) Nancy Andrews, born in 1789; died in her twelfth year.
- (3) Esther Andrews, born in 1791; remained unmarried and died in Hector, N. Y., in her 86th year; buried at Logan.
- (4) Jeremiah Andrews, born in 1793; settled in Albion, Noble County, Indiana.
- (5) William Andrews, born in 1795; settled in Spencer, Tioga County, N. Y.

(6) Richard Andrews was born in West Stockbridge, Mass., Jan. 4, 1797. Most of his youth was passed in Canaan, Conn. But in 1837 he went to western New York, and on Sept. 5, 1839, married Jane Davison of Tyrone, Steuben—now Schuyler—county. In the Spring of 1840 they moved to a small farm near Logan in Hector, where their active life was spent. Lamed by accident when a lad, he became a tailor, and with his family and apprentices for many years conducted a “shop” that clothed the men and boys of the farmers’ families for miles around. Earnestly yet liberally religious, he was, while yet in his teens, licensed as a “local preacher” in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was a charter member of the first temperance society in America, if not in the world, which was organized in Litchfield, Conn., by Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher, father of Henry Ward. He was a personal friend of and co-worker with Rev. Abner Chase and Rev. “Billy” Hibbard. Gifted in utterance, with a remarkable memory and aptness in quotation, and possessing sufficient eccentricity always to awaken interest, he was for several years a successful evangelist. It was while conducting a revival that he met his future wife, Jane Davison, a member of the choir, who, he said, “sang more like an angel than any other mortal I ever heard.” Two prominent characteristics were his sublime optimism, and his ability to weave classic literature into stories for children. His oral renderings of Homer, Virgil and Plutarch antedated and were not inferior to the modern school versions of those classics. The following incident illustrates his steadfast view of the "bright side": On a very cold night he came home late from a nine-mile ride with a load of coal. As, half-frozen, he entered the house, his first words were,—“Well, Jane, I have had good luck to-night. My wagon broke down right in the village of Burdett, where I could get it mended. Had it been in the country, I don't know what I should have done.” To such a spirit the world could never go wrong.

His wife was a worthy help-meet, also deeply religious and highly gifted in prayer. The voice that first charmed him, a soprano of remarkable sweetness and power, retained its music for years. Her singing was confined to hymns and nursery songs. A favorite with her children was Watts' cradle hymn:

“Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber.
Holy angels guard thy bed!
Heavenly blessings without number
Gently fall upon thy head!”

A devoted, self-sacrificing wife and mother, she is held in blessed remembrance by those whose childhood she directed and whose lives she influenced.

Both husband and wife were noted for their hospitality. At their home itinerant preachers and needy strangers ever found a warm welcome.

Literally, they “lived in a house by the side of the road, and were the friends of man.” Richard died at the home of their eldest daughter, Mrs. Caswell in Cherokee, Iowa, Dec. 12, 1886, and Jane at the home of the youngest, Mrs. Fowler, in Omaha, Neb., Feb. 10, 1895. Both are buried at Cherokee, his head-stone bearing the inscription—“He loved God and little children.”

(7) Elijah Andrews, born in 1799; settled in Housatonic, Mass.

(8) David Andrews, born in 1801; died in his teens.

(9) Daniel Ferrand Andrews, M. D., named for their minister, born in 1803; settled in Smithfield, Bradford County, Penn. He changed the spelling to Andrus “because people pronounced it that way.” One of his grandsons, Gen. C. Justin Bailey, a graduate of West Point Military Academy, is now commanding the Military Department of the Philippines. Two others are prominent business men of Jamestown, N. Y., where their mother, Fanny Andrews Bailey, aged 88, but still retaining her intellectual vigor, takes part in church, literary and community activities. Her husband, the late Milton Bailey, was prominent in helping organize the original Chautauqua.

(10) Orinda Andrews, born in 1806; married Rev. Joseph Pearsall, a Methodist Episcopal clergyman, died in Hector, N. Y., and is buried at Logan. She left one daughter, Mary, aged 13, who remained through childhood in the family of her Uncle Richard. Her son, Wallace Thayer, is a prominent lawyer of Buffalo, N. Y.

(11) Hiram Andrews, born in 1808; settled in Canaan, Conn. He invented the "dish" saw for cutting hollow ware.

(12) Harriet Andrews, twin sister of Hiram, married ——— Rhiel and died early leaving one son, Charles.

Eighth

Children of Richard and Jane Davison Andrews

(1) Charles Thomas Andrews was born near Logan, in Hector, Tompkins — now Schuyler—County, N. Y., July 15, 1842, and married Oct. 22, 1864, at Owatonna, Minn., Mary Elizabeth Clark of Tyrone, N. Y. Both were teachers, each having begun at the age of 16, in order to aid in obtaining their education.

The life work of Charles was chiefly educational and editorial. As an educator, he served as teacher, School Commissioner and Superintendent, and Inspector of State Schools in New York. Editorially, he was assistant editor on the Watkins, N. Y. Express; editor and publisher of the Seneca County Courier, a Republican Weekly at Seneca Falls, N. Y.; associate editor on the Binghamton, N. Y., Daily Republican, and the South Bend, Indiana, Daily Times; and is now employed in that capacity on the Monthly Eagle Magazine, the official organ of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

In the national observance—in accordance with the proclamation of the President—of the Centennial year of the Independence of the United States, he was made the official historian of Schuyler County, N. Y., and delivered the oration at the Fourth of July, 1876, celebration in Watkins. In 1899 he was sent by the Secretary of State of New York, on a mission to Cuba and Porto Rico; and in 1907, he conducted experiments for the Continental Mexican Rubber Company at Cedros in the State of Zacatecas, Mexico. For over 30 years, while in Schuyler and Seneca Counties, N. Y., he was prominent among the Republican party leaders, and had a wide acquaintance with public men and educators in the State.

Mary E. Clark, his wife, had been a successful teacher. With a clear and distinct but “low, sweet voice, an excellent thing in woman,” she was a very effective reader, and in her early teaching was urged to prepare herself as a public elocutionist; but circumstances prevented. Her brightness and amiability made her a favorite in the Seminary where she was educated, and where, in their social functions she was noted for apt rhyming jingles.

She continued teaching for one year after marriage, and, thenceforward, devoted her life to her family and to social duties in church and community. Possessed of winning ways, warm sympathies, sound judgment, and perennial cheerfulness, her affection, efficiency, wisdom, hopefulness and unselfish devotion made her the perfect wife and mother. She was, in the fullest sense, a helpmeet to her husband. Her care for her children and influence over them did not end when, grown to manhood and womanhood, they were scattered far and wide. By frequent letters she counseled, encouraged and inspired them, and they returned her motherly devotion with a filial affection and honor, that cheered her heart and brightened her declining years.

She lived in the present, never bemoaning the past or being beguiled by the future. Deeply though not ostentatiously religious, she trusted God and did her part. In success she was not unduly elated, and in sorrow or adverse circumstances, her brave heart never faltered; nor did she ever lose her sublime confidence, often expressed, that "if we but do our duty all is for the best." When near three score years and ten and believed to be at the point of death from pneumonia, she said to her life companion—"We have both done the best we could." Nearly ten years later, April 17, 1916, she died of apoplexy at South Bend, Ind. Almost her last words, spoken to her husband the evening before the fatal stroke, were in grateful recognition of the kind Providence that had guided their lives and given success and happiness to their children. She sleeps by the side of their "baby-girl," Bertha, in Logan cemetery, Hector, in the beautiful Lake Country of Western New York, amid the scenes of their early married life, and in sight of her birth-place across the Seneca Lake.

In person and character she fully met Wordsworth's description:

"Her eyes as stars of twilight fair:
Like Twilight's too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful dawn:
A countenance whereon did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet:
A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food,
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears and smiles:
A being breathing thoughtful breath:
A traveler between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength and skill:
A perfect Woman nobly planned
To warn, to comfort and command:
And yet a Spirit, still, and bright,
With something of an angel-light."

The demands of business had made Mr. and Mrs. Andrews, residents of Owatonna, Minn., of Schuyler, Seneca and Tompkins Counties, N. Y., and of South Bend, Indiana. Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, they were, during their active years prominent in church, in Sunday School and in literary and social uplifting community activities. In 1914, they celebrated their Golden Wedding, revisiting many of the scenes of their youth and middle life and renewing old acquaintances—among these being Rev. Thomas

VALENTINE

To our Children, Accompanying the Picture on the Page Opposite.

In eighteen hundred thirty-nine,
Your mother came, a Valentine,
To cheer the hearts, through light and dark,
Of Almari' and B. S. Clark.
As years passed by and others came,
She left her home and changed her name;
And then you came—both boys and girls,
To brace her up through life's wild whirls;
And whether East or in the West,
She loves her own dear ones the best.
Though you no longer need her care,
She thinks of each whene'er at prayer;
And you can see, though getting old,
The babies still she likes to hold;
And in her children's children's joys,
She sees her own dear girls and boys.

He has been a member of the Board of School Trustees and is president of the City Board of Health, and a United States Pension Examiner. Mrs. Eastman is active in church and community work—charity, literary and uplifting; is a prominent member of the Ladies' Shakespeare and Progress Clubs and has been president of the former.

- (2) Lincoln Clark Andrews; born in Owatonna, Minn., Nov. 21, 1867; graduated from West Point Military Academy in 1893; served on the staff of Gen. Sumner at the battle of Santiago, Cuba, in the Spanish-American War of 1898; as Major of U. S. Volunteers, had command in the pacification of the Island of Leyte, during the Philippine insurrection of 1899-1900, and was brevetted Lieutenant-Colonel, for bravery and skill in that campaign; served as Inspector-Instructor of Cavalry in the New York and Vermont district, 1911-1915, and as instructor of Cavalry in the Plattsburg training camp, 1915; is the author of the military text books—"The Basic Course for Cavalry," and "The Fundamentals of Military Service"; was stationed for a year on the Mexican border and is now for the third time serving in the Philippines. He was commissioned major of cavalry July 1, 1916. October 5, 1899, he married Charlotte Williams Graves, born May 19, 1873. daughter of Rev. Gemont Graves, D. D., of Burlington, Vt.

(3) Genevieve Andrews, born at North Hector, N. Y., Jan. 5, 1870; educated at Mynderse Academy, Seneca Falls, N. Y., Boston Music School, and a Chicago University Extension Course in art. Since 1900 she has been teacher of Drawing in Plattsburgh, N. Y., State Normal School, and instructor in Summer schools and Teachers' Institutes.

(4) Arthur Vincent Mekeel Andrews, born in Hector, N. Y., Nov. 11, 1871; prepared for Cornell University at Mynderse Academy; but being attacked with hemorrhage of the lungs sought health in the West. He lived successively in Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Mexico, in a sixteen-years' vain struggle with tuberculosis. After a brave and noble life he fell a victim to the disease, dying Jan. 18, 1909, at Colorado Springs, where he is buried.

(5) Bertha Andrews, born in Watkins, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1875; died in Hector of scarlet fever, March 21, 1881 and is buried in Logan cemetery.

(6) Benjamin Richard Andrews, born in Hector, N. Y., Dec. 31, 1877, obtained A. B. and A. M. from Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., and Ph. D. from Columbia University, New York City; had charge of erecting and equipping the building for the School of Household Arts, Teachers' College, Columbia, and is now a professor in that institution. He is the author of several bulletins on Household Science, published by the National Bureau of Education; editor of a series of books on the same subject and lecturer on Domestic Economy. July 9, 1907, he married Elizabeth L. Russell of Watkins, N. Y., born June 4, 1877. Because of economic exigencies in the nation in connection with the War of 1917, Columbia University temporarily released him from the duties of his professorship, and he was appointed Expert on Thrift and Assistant Director of the National Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

- (7) Don Ethelbert Andrews, born in Hector, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1881; obtained degree of Civil Engineer from Cornell University; was employed for a time on the Panama Canal; then by Rubber Companies, at Torreon, Mexico; Marathon, Texas, and in the Congo region of Africa. He is now Director of the Technical Department in the General Rubber Company, a subsidiary of the United States Rubber Company, at Kisaran, Sumatra. He married: first at Marathon, Texas, July 4, 1910, Josephine Bradford Cleaver, who was born Aug. 27, 1883 and died at San Antonio, Texas, June 12, 1913; second, at Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 17, 1917, Ella Barker Westcott, who was born April 11, 1878.

- (8) Josephine Adair Andrews, born in Seneca Falls, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1883; obtained A. B. from Cornell University and A. M. from Teachers' College, Columbia, and taught Physical Culture two years at the Sate Normal School, Winona, Minn. On June 28, 1911 she married Walter Henderson Magill of Philadelphia, who was born Dec. 11, 1878 and is a teacher in the Friends' School at Westtown, Penn.

First Generation

John and Mariah Davison, lived and died in New Jersey, during the eighteenth Century. They had four sons, Israel, Lewis, Peter and Alvah, who moved to the Lake Country of Western New York. Lewis had several children. Peter and Alvah each one son.

Second

Israel Davison was born in New Jersey about 1785, and married, in 1808, Martha Van Houton of the same State, whose brother, Garrett, had settled in Waterloo, N. Y. They purchased a farm in Barrington, Yates County, N. Y., where the wife died about 1820, leaving five children. Israel married a second wife by whom he had three sons and five daughters. He moved to Bradford, Steuben County and purchased a farm which he lost through defective title. He died in 1856 at the home of his daughter, Mariah, wife of Roswell T. Hurd, in Watkins, and is buried at Odessa, N. Y.

Third

Children of Israel and Martha Van Houton Davison

- (1) Gardner Davison, born in 1810; died unmarried, about 1848; buried at Odessa, N. Y.
- (2) Rachel Davison, born in 1812; married David Wood and moved to Wisconsin.

- (3) Mariah Davison, born May 21, 1814; married Roswell T. Hurd, settled in Watkins. They had four children, Henry, Rosetta, Olive—Mrs. Chas. McCoy—and Byron L. Mr. and Mrs. McCoy have one daughter, Alice.
- (4) Jane Davison, born March 3, 1816, in Barrington, but passed her childhood in Bradford and Tyrone. An incident in her school life at Bradford, shows the views held in those days on female education. It was not thought necessary for a girl to learn anything but the “three Rs.” So when Jane’s ambition led her to study Geography, she had to recite, the only girl, in a class of boys, and was ridiculed by her mates as a “tomboy.” However, she persevered, and later taught the school in that district. Sept. 5, 1839 she married Richard Andrews and the next spring they moved to Hector, N. Y. She died at the home of her youngest daughter in Omaha, Neb., Feb. 10, 1895. As an indication of a century’s change in views on education, her children, grand-children, and so far as they are old enough, her great grand-children, both boys and girls, have obtained higher education — most of them in colleges and universities.
- (5) Peter Davison, born in 1818; died in early childhood.

THE CLARK LINE

First Generation

James Clark was born April 12, 1746, on Long Island. On January 4, 1770, he married Betty Boughton, who was born Dec. 29, 1752. They moved to a farm in Orange County, N. Y. They had three sons and eight daughters.

Second

Seth Clark, their second child and oldest son, was born Oct. 5, 1772. On April 23, 1797, he married Mary Fenton who was born Dec. 2, 1779, and died Dec. 2, 1807. They had three sons and two daughters. On June 14, 1808, Seth married, as his second wife, Mary Bailey Smith, born Jan. 28, 1775—a widow with one daughter, Betsy. They lived successively in Orange, Seneca and Wayne Counties, and finally settled in north-eastern Tyrone, Steuben County, N. Y. Seth died May 17th, 1851, and his wife, March 11, 1857. She was blind for several years. Both were devout Baptists of the old school. They had four sons and one daughter.

Children of Seth and Mary Bailey Smith Clark

(1) Benjamin Smith Clark was born April 8, 1809, in Wayne County, N. Y. On Jan. 1, 1838 he married Almariah Tennant. They started with a small farm in north-eastern Tyrone, on the Old Pre-emption road, but in 1857 moved to a larger one, the "Caswell Place," one mile south and one mile west. Mr. Clark was an intelligent, industrious and thrifty farmer. Mrs. Clark was an unusually bright, ambitious and energetic woman, adding with her loom to the family income. Both aided and encouraged their daughters in securing an education. They were types of the hardy yeomanry that has given our country its prosperity — its moral, intellectual and material strength. They embodied the virtues of the best American citizenship. Mr. Clark died at their residence, April 5, 1885, and Mrs. Clark at the home of her daughter Mary, Mrs. Charles T. Andrews, in Seneca Falls, N. Y., June 7, 1892. Both are buried in Altay Baptist cemetery.

- (2) Seth Clark, Jr., born Feb. 17th, 1813; married Susan Tennant, Feb. 12, 1838. They had one son.
- (3) Ira B. Clark, born Dec. 27, 1814; married Eliza Brown, Oct. 13, 1836, and died March 8, 1878. They had four sons and two daughters.
- (4) Jesse S. Clark, born April 9, 1817; married Mary E. Jessup, Dec. 28, 1850. They had two sons and one daughter.
- (5) Mary Clark, born Oct. 17, 1818; married Cyrus Shattuck, Nov. 21, 1843. They had two sons and two daughters. The oldest son, George S., a favorite cousin of Mary E. Andrews, is a banker in Dundee, N. Y., and has two sons.

Children of Benj. S. and Almariah Tennant Clark

- (1) Mary Elizabeth Clark was born Feb. 14, 1839. She was educated at Starkey Seminary, taught several years, married Charles T. Andrews, Oct. 22, 1864, and died at South Bend, Ind., April 17, 1916. She was of medium height, graceful in form and movement, had black hair which became gray at 40, and large, dark eyes that never lost their luster. From early childhood she was noted as remarkably apt and efficient. Endued with courage, sound sense and cheery hopefulness, her standard of thought and rule of action are well expressed in Longfellow's Psalm of Life:

"Trust no future howe'er pleasant!
Let the dead past bury its dead!
Act—act, in the living present!
Heart within and God o'erhead!"

- (2) Adaline Clark, born July 9, 1840; died Nov. 8, 1844.

Third (c)

George Clark, their eldest, married Erva Jackson. They had three sons and one daughter.

Fourth (c)

Ethan Jackson Clark, their oldest child, married Sept. 24, 1867, Alice Jane, daughter of Benjamin S. and Almariah Clark. (For their children see Clark Line—Fifth (b)).

THE TENNANT LINE

First Generation

Benjamin Tennant, descended from the same English ancestry as the wife of Henry M. Stanley, was born in Rhode Island, about 1790. He there married Elizabeth Corey, a member of an old New England family. In 1820 they moved to Western New York, settling first in Yates County, but later moving to north-eastern Tyrone, on the Old Pre-emption road. He was a shoe-maker by occupation, and before the days of shoe manufactures, furnished the foot gear of the families for miles around. He died about 1855 and his wife ten years later.

Second

Children of Benjamin and Elizabeth Corey Tennant

- (1) Susan Tennant, born in Rhode Island, 1815; married Seth Clark, Jr., Feb. 12, 1838. They had one son.
- (2) Almariah Tennant, born in Rhode Island, Jan. 27, 1817; married Benjamin S. Clark, Jan. 1st, 1838, and died June 7, 1892. (For her children see Clark line, 4th generation).
- (3) Samuel Tennant, settled in Dundee, N. Y.; had two sons.
- (4) Horace Tennant, married Eliza Fenno, of Tyrone; had two sons.

- (5) Sarah Tennant, married D. D. Fenno; moved to Minnesota; had two sons.
- (6) Gilbert Tennant, born in 1825; married Mary L. Smith of Reading. Schuyler County, N. Y.: settled in Wautoma, Wis., where he became a prominent citizen, and died in 1905. His wife survived him until April 22, 1916. They had two sons and five daughters. Mrs. Tennant was a favorite aunt of Mary E. Andrews, whom she survived five days.
- (7) Elizabeth Tennant, born in 1834; married E. Ray Fenno and moved to Minnesota. They had three children.

We spend our years as a tale that is told.

Ps. 90:9.

Addenda: Referring to Page 9, first paragraph—
Orinda Bosworth had a brother who reached the age of 105, and a sister who lived until she was 106. She had another sister who married a Mr. Lowman and settled in the Chemung valley, near Elmira, N. Y. Among her descendants are the Lowmans and McDowells of that part of the country.

Page 52—The only survivor of Ira B. Clark's children is B. C. Clark, a G. A. R. veteran now living in Chicago. He was about the age and a childhood playmate of Mary E. Clark Andrews.
